The Emotional Cycle of the Love Addict

The Emotional Cycle of the Love Avoidant

THE LOVE ADDICT

1. is attracted to the seductiveness and apparent "power" of the Love Avoidant.
2. feels high as the fantasy is triggered.
3. feels relief from pain of loneliness, emptiness, and not mattering to partner.
4. shows more neediness and denies reality of the Avoidant's walls.
5. develops awareness of partner's walls and behavior outside the relationship and denial crumbles.
6. enters withdrawal.
7. obsesses about how to get the Love Avoidant to return or how to get even.
8. compulsively acts out obsessive plans.
9. repeats the cycle with the Love Avoidant, if he or she returns, or with a new partner.

THE LOVE AVOIDANT

1. is unable to say no to the relationship.
2. connects to the Love Addict with seduction.
3. feels engulfed anyway, moves to a wall of anger or resentment and gets critical of partner.
4. uses resentment or sense of being a victim to move to a wall of distance.
5. seeks intensity outside the relationship in order to feel "alive" and have a life of his or her own.
6. repeats the cycle by returning to the relationship out of fear of being left or guilt, or by finding a new relationship.

RELATIONAL CONNECTIONS IN CHILDHOOD

Healthy Attachment

The Major Care Giver
Takes care of the Child

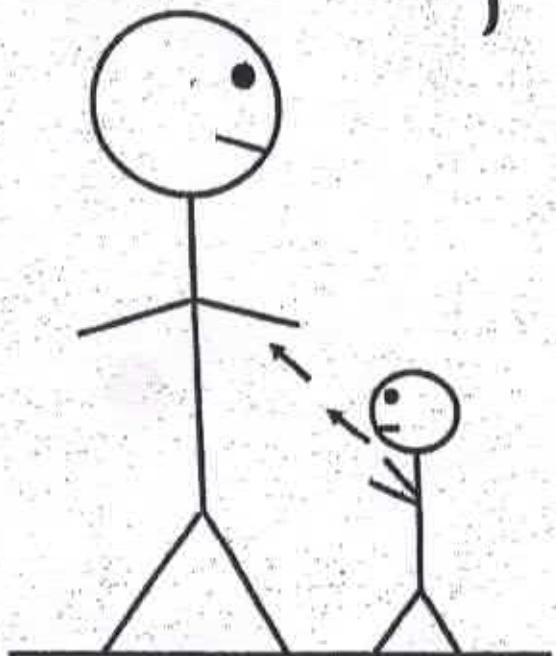

Functional Bonding

(Involves affirming, nurturing and limit setting)

-Healthy-

Intimacy = Control /
Duty / Obligation

The Major Care Giver
Uses the Child
To take care of herself

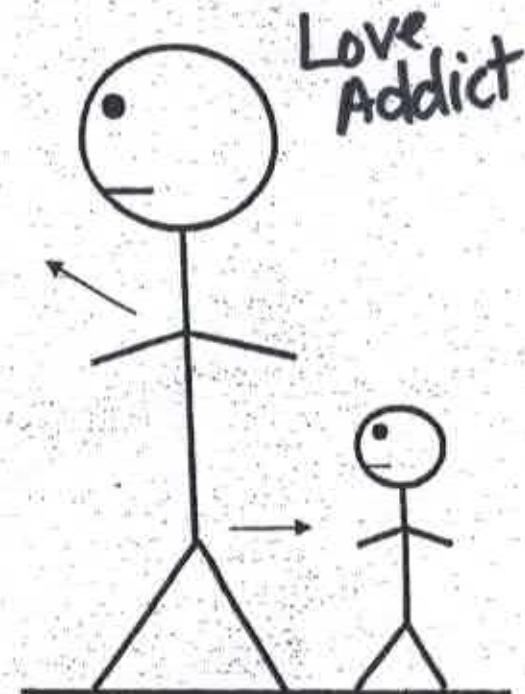

Enmeshment
(Abusive, as it uses the child)

Love Avoidant

Unit VI

Fear of Abandonment /
Rejection

The Major Care Giver
Abandons the Child

Abandonment/Neglect

(Abusive, as it fails to provide the help a child needs)

"if they really know who I am they'd like me"

LOVE ADDICTION CYCLE

Greatest fear is that of abandonment with an underlying fear of intimacy

Trauma Issues

I am worthless in relationship to my partner.
I need to be taken care of as I can't survive alone.
If I don't get close enough relationally, I'll die.

LOVE AVOIDANT CYCLE

Greatest fear is that of intimacy with an underlying fear of abandonment

Trauma Issues

My sense of value comes from taking care of needy people.
My job relationally is to take care of needy people.
If I don't, I feel guilty.
To be relational (intimate) is to suffocate (die).
